O teach me to believe thee thus conceal'd;
And ſearch no farther than thy ſelf reveal'd.
Dryden's Hind and Panther, Part I.

IN our 68th Journal, publiſhed Ap. 22. being thurſday in Eaſter Week, ſome account was given of that learned and ancient Member of our Society Dr. RICHARD TINDAL, the famous Author of Chriſtianity as old as the Creation. And to manifeſt our impartiality to the world, ſome arguments in defence of Revelation brought againſt that celebrated book, by Mr. LAW, were extracted from a late Piece of his, intitled, The Caſe of Reaſon or natural Religion fairly and fully ſtated. And becauſe this Gentleman affects a very cloſe way of arguing, and pretends to fight our Author at his own weapons, and even to turn them againſt him; it was thought proper to give a further Specimen of his abilities; eſpecially at this ſolemn ſeaſon of Whitſuntide, when Enquiries concerning Divine Revelation are the propereſt ſubjects to employ out thoughts.

The Author of Chriſtianity as old, &c. having laid it down as an undeniable rule of God's actions, That he muſt act according to the relation he ſtands in to his creatures; Mr. L. from thence ſhews the incapacity of hu an reaſon, to judge truly of God's proceedings in regard to divine revelation.

If the fitneſs of actions reſults from the nature and relations of beings, then the fitneſs of God's actions, as he is an omniſcient creator and governor, to whom every thing is eternally foreknown, over beings endu'd with freedom of will, muſt be to us very incomprehenſible. For nothing can be fit for God to do, either in creation, or providence, but what has its fitneſs founded in his own foreknowledge of every thing that would follow, from every kind of creation, and every manner of providence. And therefore every reaſon on which the fitneſs of ſuch a providence is founded, is not only unknown to us, but by a neceſſity of nature impoſſible to be known by us. P. 78, 79.

This may help us to an eaſy ſolution of thoſe unreaſonable queſtions which this Writer puts in this manner. If the deſign of God in communicating any thing of himſelf to men was their happineſs, would not that deſign have oblig'd him, who at all times alike deſires their happineſs, to have at all times alike communicated it to them? If God always acts for the good of his creatures, what reaſon can be aſſign'd, why he ſhould not from the beginning have diſcover'd ſuch things as make for their good, but defer the doing it 'till the Time of Tiberius? Since the ſooner this was done, the greater would his goodneſs appear. P. 393. God's goodneſs, directed by his own foreknowledge of the fitneſs of times, and of the ſtate and actions of free agents, deferr'd a certain revelation to the time of Tiberius, becauſe he foreſaw it would then be an act of the greateſt goodneſs, and have its beſt effects upon the world. To ask therefore What reaſon can be aſſign'd, why ſo good and beneficial a revelation was not ſooner made, is asking, What reaſon can be aſſign'd, why God intends the greateſt good by what he does, or ſtays for the doing any thing, 'till ſuch time as makes it a greater good, than if he had done it ſooner: it is asking, Why God ſhould act according to his own foreknowledge of the ſtate and actions of free agents, and order all things according to a fitneſs reſulting from ſuch a foreknowledge? P. 81.---85.

This Writer aſks, How it is conſiſtent with the notion of God's being univerſally benevolent, not to have reveal'd it to all his children, who had equal need of it? P. 196. But if they had equal need of it, yet if they were not equally fit for it, but prepared only to have their guilt increaſed by it, then God s goodneſs to them is very manifeſt, by withholding it from them, and reſerving it for thoſe who would be made happier by it. —— He aſks again, Was it not as eaſy for God to have communicated it to all nations, as to any one nation or perſon, or in all languages, as in one? It is as eaſy to God to make all men conformable to his will, as to make trees and plants grow according to his pleaſure; yet it is not as fit and reaſonable for God to do all by power in the rational world, as in the vegetable.— Again it is objected that a divine revelation muſt either be the effect of juſtice, or elſe of mercy and free goodneſs: but in either of theſe caſes it ought to be univerſal; for juſtice muſt be done to all. But if it is the effect of mercy and free goodneſs, this Writer asks, How a being can be denominated merciful and good, who is ſo only to a few, but cruel and unmerciful to the reſt? P. 401. It is anſwer'd, 1. That there is neither juſtice in God without mercy, nor mercy without juſtice; and to aſcribe a revelation to either of them ſeparately, has no more truth or reaſon in it, than to aſcribe the creation, either to the wiſdom, or power of God, in contradiſtinction to the other. 2. A divine revelation is not owing to the juſtice or free goodneſs of God, either ſeparately or jointly conſider'd; but to the goodneſs, mercy, and juſtice of God, govern'd and directed by his eternal foreknowledge of all the effects of every revelation, at any, or all times. He ſhews his goodneſs in a revelation to this part of the world, not becauſe it is a part that alone wants it, not becauſe he can beſtow his favours as he pleaſes; but becauſe by acting ſo with ſuch a part, he beſt ſhews his goodneſs and regard to the whole. He reveals himſelf at ſuch a time, not becauſe he at that time begins to have a partial or particular kindneſs, but becauſe by ſo timeing his goodneſs, he beſt ſhews his care and goodneſs throughout the whole duration of human things. And thus God, by being particular in the time and place, is not merciful to a few, and cruel to many, but is moſt merciful to all; becauſe he only choſe ſuch time, and place, and perſons, becauſe all would receive more benefit from it, than they poſſibly could from the choice of any other. P. 85. 90.

But it is here objected, If God by reaſon of his own perfections muſt be thus myſterious and incomprehenſible, both in the matter and manner of divine revelation; How can we know what revelations we are to receive as divine? How can we be blam'd for rejecting this, or receiving that, if we can't comprehend the reaſons on which every revelation is founded, both as to its matter and manner? 1. Juſt as we may be blam'd for ſome notions of God, and commended for others, tho' we can have no notions of him, but ſuch as are myſterious and inconceivable. And tho' a man knows the reaſons of a divine revelation, either as to its matter or manner, as imperfectly as he knows the divine nature; yet he may be as liable to account for believing falſe revelations, as for idolatry; and as full of guilt for rejecting a true revelation, as for denying the only true God. 2. Tho' we are inſufficient for comprehending the reaſons on which the particular matter or manner of any divine revelation is founded; yet we may be ſo far ſufficient judges of the reaſons for receiving or not receiving a revelation as divine, as to make our conduct therein juſtly accountable to God. For if he can ſhew a revelation to proceed from him by the ſame undeniable evidence, as he ſhews the creation to be his work; if he can make himſelf as viſible in a particular extraordinary manner, as he is by his general and ordinary providence; then tho' we are as unqualify'd to judge of the myſteries of a revelation, as of thoſe in creation and providence; yet we may be as fully obliged to receive a revelation, as to acknowledge the creation to be the work of God; and as highly criminal for diſbelieving it, as for denying a general providence. For the excellence of a revelation is to be acknowledg'd, for the ſame reaſon that we are to acknowledge the excellence of creation and providence; not becauſe they are wholly according to human conception, and have no myſteries, but becauſe they are prov'd to be of God. And a revelation is to be receiv'd as coming from God; not becauſe of its internal excellence, or becauſe we judge it to be worthy of him; but becauſe God has declar'd it to be his, in as plain and undeniable a manner, as he has declar'd creation and providence to be his. And tho' no revelation can come from God, but what is truly worthy of him; yet what is ſo can't poſſibly be known by us, but by a revelation from himſelf. And he that pretends, independently of any revelation, to ſhew how, and in what manner God ought to make a revelation worthy of himſelf, is as great a Viſionary, as he that ſhould pretend independently of the creation, or without learning any thing from it, to ſhew how God ought to have proceeded in it, to make it worthy of himſelf. P. 90 96.

SIR,

IT was with great concern the good company here received the news of the death of the late ingenious Mr. J--l J s; a Gentleman not only eminent for his ſkill in the Oriental Languages, but alſo one, who, even in theſe times of ridicule, ſhew'd an uncommon courage and merit, by glorying in the character and name of a Virtuoſo, and was not only himſelf a diligent enquirer into the more curious and minute parts of natural Hiſtory, but likewiſe endeavour'd to beget and propagate a love for that delightful and uſeful ſtudy, among people of all ranks, even the loweſt; as will appear by the following Letter, which we can aſſure you is genuine. The making of it publick is certainly very proper at this time, when a great fleet is going out, which may by this means be made ſerviceable to England: for tho' the orders ſhould be as pacifick, as ſome formerly given, yet if every ſailor will follow the directions of Mr. J——s, he will at leaſt enlarge our acquiſitions in knowledge, and enrich the repoſitories of the curious. And for ſuch a practice as this Hiſtory furniſhes us with an example in CALIGULA's command to his ſoldiers on the ſea-ſhore. But as our Countrymen are generally lovers of Poetry, and according to the common obſervation, precepts in verſe are moſt eaſily remember'd; we have amongſt us put the Letter into rhime, wherein the ſenſe is religiouſly preſerved. But we ſhall detain you no longer from what has given us ſo much pleaſure, than whilſt we inform you, that an immediate publication of theſe Papers, will not only be an evidence of your zeal for publick good, but will alſo be very grateful to Sir, your humble ſervants, Inſtructions for Chriſtopher Hilliard, Foremaſt man on board the —— man of war.

Honeſt Kit,

I Heartily wiſh thee a good voyage; and the beſt way to obtain it, is to carry God with thee: keep a good conſcience; be induſtrious and void of offence, ſo thou wilt do well. Remember thy miſpent time, and be ſure to redeem it by thy carefulneſs in the preſent: and let me hear from thee upon thy return, God conducting thee ſafe. Wherever you go, keep a Journal if you can, of all that is remarkable, as winds, and change of weather, in all latitudes. Take all ſoundings, and keep the ſands, ſhells, and whatever elſe the deep ſea line or other brings up, and put it into a paper, writing on the paper, Sounding of ſuch a place in the latitude of —— &c. If you meet with any pretty ſea feathers, moſſes, weeds, trees, or plants, ſave ſome of the faireſt and beſt, which you may put up in any thing, and all together in a cagg, pitcher, or bottle; excepting the ſea feathers or trees, which muſt be kept very even and ſafe. If you can get any ſtrange fiſhes, they will be acceptable. When you go aſhore, and meet with any ſhells that are whole, keep them for me, three or four of each ſort; and if you find any pretty ſhining ſands, take a pound of each, or half a pound; and pick up pretty ſtones of divers colours, as green, red, blue, yellow, black, or white, and clear, as well as mixt colours, —— If you meet with any ſort of minerals, or ores, likewiſe get me ſome. When you are on ſhore, pick ſome pretty plants, herbs, ferns, flowers, and trees, by taking a fair branch or two, or three, that is, from the top, the middle, and lower end. All theſe you muſt put into a quire of brown paper, laying the herbs, flowers, &c. very even upon a ſheet of brown paper, and ſo another on that; letting them lie three days, then changing them in freſh papers, keeping them very cloſe, for three days more, and then putting them between other freſh papers, ſo repeating them till thoroughly dry, and then laying them in order between the ſheets, and tie them up when thoroughly dry; laying them even at the bottom of your cheſt that they may not crumple or break. If you can catch any flies, butterflies, beetles, or any ſtrange pretty Inſects, put a pin through them, and pin them to a thin box, on the inſide; it will keep them with the perfect colour, and beauty, and whole. But be very tender of the butterflies, for fear of loſing the fine colour or down, and of moths. If you meet with fine ſnakes, worms, ſcorpions, batts, or pretty birds, if ſmall you may keep them in ſpirits: I will repay you what charges you are at for theſe, therefore be careful. And that you may not loſe your labour when you return to England, and if any body ſhould offer to preſs you, let them know, that you are upon the Royal Society's account, and have this commiſſion from me to collect the foregoing things, for her Majeſty's ſervice, viz. ſhells, ſtones, &c. for her grottos; and the reſt for the improvement of Natural Hiſtory knowledge and phyſick. And pray get me what good ſeeds, and bulbous flower roots you can, and berries of pretty trees, and plants for the Queen's gardens. I am ſure no ingenious nor worthy Gentleman will meddle with you, if you acquaint them with this requeſt of thine, to let you pass free, having the care and charge of these things for her Majesty's service, and the Royal Society; and I desire you will let me know who shew themselves kindly to you, that I may return their civilities, &c. God preserve and bless you. I am Yesterday came on at the Bar of the Court of Exchequer, before the L. Chief Baron Reynolds, a cause depending 2 years between the Rev. Mr. Wood, Vicar of Heston, near Hounslow, Plaint. and Ric. Bulstrode, Esq; Def. the Plaintiff claiming tythes for a farm, which ever since King Henry VIII. was exempted from paying, being one of the dissolved Monasteries belonging to the Holy Trinity of Hounslow; when after a long tryal, the Jury gave a verdict for the Def. with costs. P.

Last thursday at the meeting of the Royal Society, after the admission of M. Laur. Garcin, and Sir Jos. Ayloffe, Bar. were produced some curious impressions made on plaister of Paris, of flowers, plants, coins, &c. colour'd after the life. —— A Letter was read from Sir Tho. Dereham, (a Fellow, and a Gentleman of the Bed-chamber to the present Duke of Tuscany) giving an account of a late accident that happened at Cesena; where a Lady of Quality's body was found, burnt partly to a cinder, and partly to ashes, in her bed-chamber, as it is judged from a lighted lamp, which stood in the midst of the room, and surprized her in a fit; so that she remained in that sad condition till the morning, when only her legs, hands, and part of her skull with hair, were undestroy'd. 'Tis strange, that the small fire of a common lamp should have this force, without doing any other damage, or being perceived by the domestics; tho' the composition of the pavements and ceilings in Italy don't easily suffer by fire. —— Mr. Jones gave in once more a project for the discovery of the Longitude, of which no notice was taken: and another Scheme, equally voluminous, laborious and intelligible, was offered by Mr. Browne; to whom it was hinted, that a more compendious view would be more acceptable, and more probably deserve consideration. Since the reward proposed by England, Holland, and France, numerous have been the schemes with which the Publick has been pester'd, most of them erroneous and impracticable, and usualy by persons unacquainted with navigation or the sea, and therefore purely ideal. —— A Paper drawn up by Dr. Desaguliers was read, concerning Electricity, with observations and corollaries, drawn from Mr. Gray's and his own experiments, to shew how far they may be useful in accounting for several Phænomena in the vegetable world, for which the thanks he deserved were given him, and he desired to proceed in his experiments. —— A printed Piece wrote by Dr. Shaw and Mr. Hawksbee, as an essay for a portable Laboratory for Chymical Preparations, was presented to the Society's Library, and by them ordered to be considered, and a report made hereafter D P.

Whereas it was inserted in several of the News-papers, that Mrs. Kath. Salmon of Hitchin in Hertfordshire, who died last April, was Daughter to John Bradshaw, Esq. Serjeant at Law, and President of the pretended High Court of Justice, who sat on the tryal of King Charles I. and first signed the warrant for his execution; this is to let the publick know, that it was a gross mistake, for the deceased Gentlewoman, was one of the Daughters of the Rev. Mr. Nath Bradshaw, Minister of Willingham in Cambridgeshire, who often declared, he was no ways related to the President Bradshaw, and did upon all occasions express a very great abhorrence of his behaviour to the King. *C. This morning by 6 o'clock the 3 Regiments of foot-guards were under arms in Hyde-Park, and about nine their Majesties with the Prince of Wales, &c. came thither, when the said regiments passed several times in review before them, fired 12 rounds, and made a fine appearance, &c. WE. Went thro' their several evolutions, and made a fine appearance. LE. making an extraordinary fine appearance. SJ. —— They made no appearance at all to me, whose eyes were almost put ont by the dust.

The quarrel between a noble Lord and a Barrister at law, which had like to have terminated in a duel, is we hear happily accommodated. —— This week the Commissioners for the State-lottery appointed 20 Clerks in ordinary, and are to appoint 7 more extraordinary. —— Great collections have been made in Huntingtonshire for the poor sufferers at Ramsey. the town of S. Ives sent 60 guineas, the D. of Manchester 50 guineas; and Rob. Pigot, Esq; one of the Members for the County, 50 guineas; besides many others. LE.

On thursday last the first stone was laid for the rebuilding of Gravesend Church, by Sir Rog. Meredith, Knight of the shire for the County of Kent. P.

The project of forming a Serpentine river in Hyde-Park, which has been carried on for several months past at a vast expence, is entirely laid aside; and upwards of 100 workmen, employ'd in that undertaking, were discharged from their labour on friday last. DJ.

Mr. Booth the Tragedian, who has been a long time ill, is so well recovered, that on sunday last he went to Hampstead for the air; so that there are great hopes of his appearing again on the stage. P.

The execution of the sentence on Japhet Crooke, alias Sir Pet. Stranger, which was mentioned in several of the Papers to be appointed for friday next, proves a mistake, a warrant having been sent down yesterday to the Keeper of the King's Bench prison, fixing the same for thursday next at Charing-Cross. DJ.

MONDAY, June 7.

Yesterday the Rev. Dr. Maddox, Clerk of the closet to the Queen, preached before their Majesties, his Royal Highness the Prince, &c. at Richmond. C.

On wednesday last the D of Lorrain landed at Dover from Holland, and the next day he set out with the L. Visc. Weymouth in one coach for London, where they arrived the same evening, and has taken up his residence at a house in Dover-street, &c. C.

We hear the late Mr. Fawkes has instructed his son, an ingenious youth, in the dexterity of hand, and that the same will be performed, with the Posture-master, artificial view of the world, and all the other surprising curiosities, (as in Mr. Fawkes's life time) at the Tennis Court near the Haymarket, during the Whitsun-Holidays. DP.

On saturday last died of a pleuretick fever, Wigley Statham, Esq; son of Sir John Statham of Wigwall in Derbyshire: he was a young Gentleman of fine parts, to which was added the most polite education: he was descended from the greatest of the ancient Nobility, and by his Grandmother from the Royal Family itself. Ibid.

The Rev. Mr. Hunt, Master of the free School at Colchester, had the misfortune some days since to be thrown by his horse near Brentford: by which unhappy accident he was killed on the spot. Ibid. — I take this Gentleman to be the Mr. John Le Hunt, chief Master of the King's school at Canterbury, said to have died by a fall from his horse in several News Papers of tuesday May 18.

TUESDAY, June 8.

The R. Hon. the L. Visc. Weymouth, who arrived here on thursday night last with a retinue of 15 servants from beyond sea, was at Richmond to wait on their Majesties, and met with a most gracious reception. —— Mr. Tho. Stiles, eldest son to Sir Tho. Stiles of Wastengbury Park in the County of Kent, Bar. is made Page of honour to his Majesty. DP. —— We hear the Rev. Dr. Sydall, Dean of Canterbury and Bish of S. Davids, is appointed Bishop of Glouceſter, in the room af Dr. Wilcox, removed to the See of Rocheſter: he is to hold Deanery of Canterbury in commendam. P.

We hear from Blandford in Dorſetſhire, that laſt friday about noon a fire broke out there, which burnt with ſuch violence that it conſumed the whole town (except about 26 houſes) together with the church: the conſternation of the people was ſo great, and the fire ſo quick, that few of them ſived any of their goods; the Small-pox being riſe there added to the misfortune, for many ſick of the diſtemper were carried into the fields, where they ſoon expired: near 300 houſes are laid in aſhes, and the town is in ſuch confuſion that 'tis difficult to find a road through it. D P.

On ſaturday laſt a great cricket match was play'd in the Artillery ground, between the Gentlemen of London and Kent, 11 of a ſide, for 50 guineas, which was won by the former by 15 notches. C.

Laſt tueſday began the races at Sarum for his Majeſty's 100 guineas; 3 ſtarted, and 2 were diſtanced the firſt heat by the ſame mare that won at Winchester, viz. Mr. Jackſon's. L E. — Laſt week Mr. Will. Armſtrong, a Citizen of Oxford, walked from that city to S. Giles's Pound in 14 hours and 3 quarters for a conſiderable wager, which he won. — We hear from Steyning in Suſſex, that there is ripe Barley now growing at a farm belonging to the D. of Norfolk near that place, and ready to be delivered in 8 days; and it is reckoned there is about 16 buſhels on an acre, and very good. L E. — This is a literal completion of the LAUREATE's prophecy in the 7th verſe of his New-years Ode, That Harveſt ſhould be this year in Summer, not in Autumn.

On ſaturday in the afternoon died (as believed) of an apoplexy, Sir Will. Compton, Bar. at his ſeat at Hurſt near Oakingham in Berkſhire. Ibid. A Roman Catholick, created a Baronet by King James II. and deſcended from the Comptons of Wiltſhire. D P. 9.

WEDNESDAY, June 9.

We hear that the L. Delawar is made Comptroller of his Majeſty's Houſhold. P.

They write from York, that the Rev. Roger Waind, of about 26, was lately married to a Lincolnſhire Lady upwards of 80, with whom it is ſaid, he has about 3000 l. in money, and the enjoyment of 300 l. per ann. and a coach and four for her life only. D J.

From the PEGASUS in Grub-ſtreet.

The following letter from Angleſey, containing, as we are aſſured, matter of fact; we could not but publiſh it, with the verſes, out of regard to ſo diſtant a Correſpondent.

Gued Meiſter Baffius,

I Kepe a creat tafern for ail in my houſe, and ſum time a coocking; my Geſts as uſal after braſe drunkin, fell into quarelings apout therePeticrees; after many plows given Capt. Cack ——, and ſtunked ſo braſely, that all the cogs and ſhentlemen leaved him ſoul miſter of the pit; wherpon hur frend did wrote the following vurſes; which hur bags you to print, that they may be aſhamed of there practiſings, and ſhave my ſhugs and ſhamberpots.

Porthaethwy, Angleſey, 28 May 1731.

Yours till deth
Stopeth hur breth
RHIVIART AP HUW.

Well broke, brave MATT! at length we know,
Why TALLARD and his troops gave way;
And where, at Mons ſome years ago,
Your boaſted ſtrength and fury lay.

Monſieur advanc'd with daring pride,
Regardleſs of each ſweeping blaſt,
'Till you turn'd ſhort, and warmly ply'd
Your Bum artillery at laſt.

Can any Virtuoſo find,
From what ſtrange force this volley flies,
That, Parthian-like, ſo wounds behind,
And mauls our noſes, more than eyes?

Cannons and Mortars can't compare
With Magazines in bowels pent:
When fir'd amidſt the heat of war,
They force the touch-hole for a vent.

Let TORRES bluſter as he will,
He muſt retire with foul diſgrace;
If SABINE has but learn'd your skill,
To ſpout it in his Donſhip's face.

Your Front could not the battel win,
Tho' arm'd with braſs to face your foes;
But ſoon as e'er your Rere came in,
It took whole Squadrons by the noſe.

In ſhort, you boldly may defie
The pow'r of all the Devils in Hell:
Full in their face your engine plie,
You'll rout them all, if they can ſmell.

Whereas our good friend Mr. SCRIBLERUS SECUNDUS hath compoſed an Entertainment, called The Grub-ſtreet Opera, which he intends to exhibit at our Theatre in the Hay-market, to-morrow the 11th inſtant; and as we do preſume the ſaid Opera is calculated for the propagation of our Society, we have thought fit to publiſh theſe our Orders, ſtrictly charging all our Members to aſſemble at the ſign of the Cock and Bottle, an Alehouſe at Charing-Croſs, between the hours of three and four, thence to proceed in a body to the ſaid Theatre; and that Mr. SCRIBLERUS do take care, that a great chair be provided for ourſelf in the Front-box, and do give his attendance to conduct us thereto; and that all our Members be received and placed with that reſpect which is due to them. BAVIUS.

Dublin, June 1. They write from Allord in the County of Catherlough, that on monday 7 night, about 6 o'clock in the evening, a very heavy rain began, which continued 'till near 10 at night, when the little brook roſe higher than uſual upon ſuch occaſions; that the waſer quitted its common courſe, and ran directly through the ſtreet, and carried down 14 or 15 houſes, beſides out-houſes, and deſtroyed a very great quantity of malt, hops, ſugar, and other goods, to the value of 2000 l. 'Tis ſaid the waters broke out of the hills af Claucomu about 2 miles from Graige there being a great breach in the ſaid hills, like that in the mountain near Rock Savage, and no appearance of a flood in the Borough. There are many great breaches in the Abby walls; and the old gate between Newbold's and Kelly is quite demoliſhed. C. In the County of Carlow. P. D P. Alford. D J. 8.

Edinburgh, May 31. We are informed that on the 9th in the Pariſh of Keith, in the ſhire of Banff, a young girl was killed by thunder as ſhe was walking in the fields with another girl, and a little boy at their back: but by good providence the 2 latter were preſerved. P. 8.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSDAY, June 3.

Yeſterday arrived the Mail due from France.

Paris, June 9. N.S. The King has conferred the government of Bethune upon the Count de Rottembourg. C. &c. —— By letters from Rome we are informed that the Chevalier de S. George was gone from thence, ſome ſaid to Naples: and it is confidently reported here, that a certain Power will make him King of Naples and Sicily, for a certain ſum laid down, and paying a yearly tribute to the ſaid Power, and to his heirs for ever. But this is not the only chimera trumpt up here of late. P. —— The Abbot de Berwick, ſon to the Marſhal-Duke de Berwick, died the 3d, in his 19th year. C. The Abbot de Fitz James. P. M. L'Abbé de Berwick D P. I am told there is ſome difference between an Abbot, and a M. L'Abbé. —— The 29th paſt, the Parliament regiſter'd an Edict, by which the King, on account of the proximity of Clermont and Montferrant in Auvergne, has reunited thoſe two Cities under the name of Clermontferrant D J. The C. of June 4. has united, inſtead of reunited. —— We have advice from Conſtantinople, that the Father Capuchins of the College there are tranſlating into French all the Books printed in the Turkiſh language, in the G. Seignior's Printing-houſe; 3 of which they have already tranſlated, viz. Inſtructions for a Prince, tranſlated by M. Sielve, Interpreter at Aleppo; Inſtructions of a Father to his Children; and A Hiſtory of the laſt Siege of Vienna; both tranſlated by M. Latine, ſtudent of languages in that College. *C. Extract of a letter from Cadiz, May 22. N.S. We are in the dark as to publick affairs. Moſt people believe, that this Kingdom has no thoughts of war, there being not the leaſt preparations making of that kind; and yet our Court ſhews very little diſpoſition to an accommodation. The Britiſh Commiſſaries have been long at Seville, but we can't learn, that any Commiſſaries have been appointed to meet them on the part of Spain. The detention of the Flota's treaſure, now above 9 months ſince its arrival, and no proſpect of its being delivered, has occaſion'd ſo great poverty, and diſcouraged the Merchants ſo much, that the Trade to New Spain cannot be carry'd on, unleſs put upon a better footing. D J. —— Extract of a letter from an Engliſh Gentleman at Lisbon, May 19. N.S. From Cadiz we are adviſed, that the Spaniards will intercept all freſh proviſions going for Gibraltar, and have order'd Barca longos and a ſnow to cruiſe in the Bay for that purpoſe. L E.

FRIDAY, June 4.

Hague, June 1. N.S. Men will have it, that the Marq. de Fenelon, Ambaſſador of France, is charged with ſome commiſſion of importance, becauſe he has had ſeveral Conferences of late with their High Mightineſſes ſecret Committee, the Members whereof have even gone to his houſe. —— The coldneſs between the 2 Courts of France and G. Britain, and the contemptuous manner, in which they talk in France of this, and that, and the other, convince us more and more, that there is a Snake in the graſs. —— There has been privately handed about here, for theſe 2 days, a printed Letter of 5 or 6 pages, in anſwer to the Two that have lately appeared in favour of the Treaty of Vienna. The Author has not obſerved that decorum which he ought towards the King of G. Britain and his Miniſters, and therefore ſtrict ſearch is making after him. P.

Extract of our private letters from Paris. It is confidently affirmed, that the Catholick King is in a very bad way; and that the accident in his leg is not his only complaint. There ſeems to be an entire correſpondence between our Miniſtry and that of Seville. The Cardinal, they ſay, has ſecured the Marq. de Caſtellar, and the Marquis has ſecured his Brother Don Joſeph de Patinho. The Duke du Maine and the Count de Toulouſe are at the head of the Spaniſh Party at this Court: and that Party inſiſts, that Spain ought by all means to be kept united with France, and to be hindered from approving the Treaty of Vienna. Ibid

Capt. Gilbert, Commander of the Queen Mary, arrived in the Hope for Zant, came from Gibraltar Ap. 24. He confirms the account of the Spaniards having ſmall veſſels continually cruiſing in the Bay before that Garriſon, which prevented the leaſt communication with the Spaniards, ſo that they could have no freſh proviſions but from Barbary. He adds, that the works againſt that place were almoſt compleated, 12000 men being conſtantly employed in carrying them on; and that the fortifications erected on the ſea-ſhore, would render great part of the Bay unſafe for Ships to rice in, being within reach of their guns. D J.

SATURDAY, June 5.

Laſt night arrived the Mail from Holland.

Paris, June 4. N.S. This morning a Courier arrived from Mr. Keen: we are told he has brought advices which give hopes that his Catholick Majeſty will ſign the Act of approbation without any farther delay. D P. The laſt expreſs from Mr. Keen leaves hardly any room to doubt of the King of Spain's ſpeedy acceſſion. C.

Hague, June 12. The Duke de Richelieu, formerly Ambaſſador at Vienna, arrived here from Paris on ſunday evening, to ſee the Country; and was yeſterday with the Marq. de Fenelon, in the uſual Congreſs of Foreign Miniſters. P.

Berlin, June 4. Yeſterday about 4 in the afternoon, the King having given orders for all the Court to repair to the ſtately apartments of the late King in the Caſtle, declared there the marriage of the Princeſs Royal with the Hereditary Prince of Bareith; ſoon after was performed the ceremony of exchanging the wedding rings. The additional number of foreign Princes and Noblemen, who appeared there on this ſolemn occaſion, made the Court ſhine with extraordinary luſtre. The Hereditary Prince of Bareith open'd the Ball with the Princeſs Royal, which laſted (including the ſupper) 'till break of day D P. &c.

Conſtantinople, May 5. The war with Perſia is ſtill continued, but with great diſadvantage to the Porte. Since the ſecond rebellion, there has been more inſurrections, and the Government takes all poſſible care to hinder the Mal-contents from re-aſſembling in any part of this Capital; and the Grand Vizier cauſes ſtrong detachments of ſoldiers to patrol day and night. It is reckoned, that the new Sultan has, ſince January laſt, cauſed near 16,000 perſons to be cut off for rebellion. He has alſo given orders for ſome troops to march to Aſia, Ægypt. and Boſnia, in order to deal with the mutineers in thoſe parts, in the ſame manner as here. D J.

MONDAY, June 7.

Hague, June 8. Private letters from Vienna inform us, that the Imperial Miniſters acknowledge the Remarks which their High-Mightineſſes have made upon the New Treaty, to be judicious and well-grounded; and that ſatisfaction ought to be given to their High-Mightineſſes. —— There are ſome Great Men among us, who do not ſtick to aſſert, that this State ought not to accede upon any terms. —— Mynheer Vander Meer, Ambaſſador at the Court of Spain, confirms the general opinion, that the Guaranty of Gibraltar and Port Mahon is the great ſtumbling block to that Courts approbation of the Treaty: the Prince of Aſturia's Party having laboured to perſuade them, that all the Countries ſecured to Don Carlos in Italy are not of half the importance of thoſe 2 poſſeſſions. —— In a Cabinet Council, holden before the departure of the laſt Courier from Seville, the Queen made an effort to get the Act of approbation ſigned; but was oppoſed by Patinho at the head of the Princes Party: Her Majeſty refuted all his arguments; but ſtill he perſiſted in his over-bearing diſcourſes, 'till the Queen could endure it no longer, but flew into a paſſion, called him an impertinent ſcoundrel, and a Traitor, and told him ſhe would ſhortly make him repent his audaciouſneſs. P.

Yeſterday arrived the Mail due from France.

Paris, June 13. We are adviſed from Miſſiſippi, that M. du Perier, having received from France a ſmall reinforcement of Troops, went in purſuit of the Natchee Savages, who ſome time ſince murder'd the French at New Orleans; and now upon his approach retired into a Fort, which they had built: but the mortars made ſuch a terrible havock, that they ſurrendred at diſcretion, deſiring only the lives of their wives and children, ſaying, as to themſelves they had deſerved death for their cruelties: however their lives were ſpared; and they were carried to S. Domingo to work among the Negro ſlaves. —— The proofs which the Sieur Pelays made of the gold he brought from the mines of Senegal in Africa, having fully anſwered, they are hiring all ſorts of neceſſary workmen to ſend thither: part of them are already ſent to imbark at Rochel, and the Sieur will embark in September with the reſt, and every thing neceſſary for carrying on that great undertaking. P. &c.

TUESDAY, June 8.

Extract of a letter from a Gentleman at Utrecht, &c. — All the Treaties that have been concluded for theſe 15 years paſt were ſubject to inconveniences, which either rendered them uſeleſs, or obliged the contracting Parties to have recourſe to explanations, to make alterations, and even to contract new Alliances, to weaken or confirm the former, to which theſe latter did ſometimes appear contradictory. This of Vienna comes to the point, at which all the former were levelled: it goes to the root of all the difficulties that might ariſe from them: it abſolutely remedies all the evils to which the other only applied palliatives: in a word it eſtabliſhes the tranquillity of Europe upon ſolid foundations. P.

Vienna, May 30. Yeſterday Card. Grimaldi, who has reſided here 10 years in quality of Apoſtolick Nuncio, ſet out on his return to Rome; on which occaſion the Emperor made his Eminency a preſent of an emerald Croſs ſet with diamonds of great value. D P.

WEDNESDAY, June 9.

Yeſterday arrived a Mail from Holland.

Genoa, May 26. Our laſt letters from Corſica adviſe, that 127 Grecians, who having ſent their families and effects to Ajaccio, retired on the 28th paſt to the Caſtle de Unuvia, having been attack'd by 2500 Rebels, and couragiouſly ſuſtained ſeveral aſſaults, at length made an excurſion by night upon the Rebels with ſo good ſucceſs that they put them to flight; and purſued them for the ſpace of 3 miles, killing all that fell into their hands, and taking Standards, horſes, and a great quantity of ammunition. D P. C. D J.

Naples, May 22. On the 19th the Chevalier de S. George arrived here incognito from Albano and alighted at the Convent de Monte Oliveto, where the Pope's Nuncio had prepared an apartment for him: the occaſion of his arrival is variouſly talk'd of, ſome will have it to be on buſineſs of importance, while others impute it only to his curioſity to ſee what is remarkable in this City. D P.
